

Reminder: New CFE Trading Platform Disaster Recovery Data Center Fail-over Test on Tuesday, February 13, 2018

Overview

As previously announced, the CFE will be conducting a Disaster Recovery Data Center fail-over test on the new Bats Technology CFE trading platform on Tuesday, February 13, 2018. The new CFE production platform has been active during CFE trading hours with TEST SYMBOLS ONLY since November 6, 2017. The fail-over test will begin at approximately 9AM CT on February 13th and the new trading platform will remain active from the Disaster Recovery Data Center until the next trading date.

TPHs that wish to test their capability to trade using the new Disaster Recovery trading platform are strongly encouraged to test their new Disaster Recovery connectivity and order entry ports to input test symbol trades. Ability to receive market data from the new Disaster Recovery platform can also be tested during this time. During the test, the CFE Trade Desk and Cboe NOC will be available to address any issues encountered.

Additional Information

Please contact the CFE Trade Desk, Cboe NOC, or your Business Development contact with any questions. Additionally, you may refer to the CFE integration website for more details at <http://batsintegration.cboe.com/cfe>.

We appreciate your continued support and will work hard every day to keep earning your business by powering your potential to stay ahead of an evolving market. As always, we are committed to our customers and to making markets better as your partner in trading.
