

Cboe Options Exchange Migration to Bats Technology Planned for October 7, 2019

As announced yesterday, the migration of Cboe Options Exchange to Bats technology is planned for October 7, 2019. Technical specifications are expected to be made available by November 16, 2018, physical connectivity on February 1, 2019 and Cboe plans to begin the certification period for customer testing on March 1, 2019.

For more information, see the press release. To view materials from yesterday's customer conference call, visit the newly-launched Cboe Options integration website.

C2 Options Exchange Weekend Test Reminder

The migration of C2 Options to Bats technology is on track and the planned May 14 migration date is quickly approaching. All C2 customers are required to certify to the new platform and can do so immediately.

Trading of test symbols and series in the new C2 production environment is currently available on a daily basis and the next weekend test opportunity will be Saturday, April 14. Refer to the C2 integration website for additional details.

Saturday, April 14 Test Schedule
7:30 am CT	C2 Options production environment available for connection
7:30 am CT	Pre-open queuing session begins
8:30 am CT	Regular market trading session opens
11:00 am CT	Regular market trading session closes
OCC will participate with C2 during the test of the new C2 production trading platform.

Cboe Announces New Markets Division

Cboe Global Markets' new Markets Division, which will be co-headed by Andy Lowenthal and Bryan Harkins, unifies Cboe's product, sales, business development and account coverage personnel across the company's U.S. equities, global derivatives and FX product lines and ETP listings business. And each of these product lines will be supported by multi-asset resource teams.

In time, every customer will have a single point of contact within the Markets Division. See Wednesday's press release for additional details.
